

POLICING IN EAST HERTS

East Herts continues to enjoy low levels of crime and has seen further reductions during 2009-2010. Partners have been working to reduce criminal damage and anti-social behaviour and, as a result, offences have fallen by 10%. During 2010-2011, emphasis will continue to be placed on reducing crimes and bringing offenders to justice.

- > A successful approach to partnership working was highlighted in Spring 2009 when a busy night club was closed following a review of the premises' licence. By gathering evidence and dealing proactively with the offences committed, the premises were reviewed and ordered to cease trading, leading to a significant reduction in crime and disorder in the affected area.
- > 2009-2010 saw the introduction of mobile Automatic Number Plate Recognition (ANPR) technology within police vehicles. These vehicles are supplemented by static ANPR cameras across the District. The effective use of this technology, which can instantly identify vehicles known to be involved with crime, has resulted in a significant number of arrests and prosecutions. Investment in this technology has helped to deny criminals the use of the roads and has been particularly effective in locating cross-border criminals, who target East Herts from other areas.
- > Local Neighbourhood Watch schemes continue to thrive across the area and are hugely effective in maintaining low levels of crime. Distraction burglaries have reduced by more than 60% compared to last year, thanks in part to the success of Neighbourhood Watch.
- > Police in East Herts continue to focus on their commitment to the national Policing Pledge. Neighbourhood Policing Teams in East Herts have been continually working alongside partners and local residents to tackle locally identified problems, demonstrating their commitment to delivering a high quality, local policing service.

HERTFORDSHIRE
POLICE AUTHORITY

THE COST OF POLICING HERTFORDSHIRE

Hertfordshire Constabulary is one of the top performing forces in the country and consistently delivers results - a 20% drop in crime in the last five years and detections at an all-time high.

The Authority gets about 60% of its funding from Government grants but Hertfordshire has missed out in recent years. The formula used to allocate the money shows we should receive more but, this coming year alone, Government is withholding £4.1m of the grants due. This leaves a shortfall against the amount we need to maintain our high standard of policing.

To fill this gap, and to minimise Council Tax increases, we have previously used money from our reserves. However, these are now at a lower level and the amount we can draw from them is limited. We now face unprecedented financial pressures. The public have told us they want us to maintain and improve police services but this could only be achieved by a substantial increase in Council Tax – not something the Authority felt was reasonable, given the wider financial climate.

We have, therefore, increased Council Tax by 3.5% (just under 10p a week), which means someone living in a Band D property will pay £147.82 (£2.84 a week). This is well below the national average for shire forces. Our Net Budget will be £190.8m, a rise of £5.9m, with nationally agreed pay increases accounting for more than two-thirds of that. We will have 3,951 officers and staff - about 100 fewer than currently. The highest ever level of savings will be made to balance the budget and enable £0.9m investment in priority areas such as neighbourhood policing and responding to anti-social behaviour and serious and organised crime.

Giving you value for money

We pride ourselves on providing good value for money – something recognised nationally in recent independent inspections.

To do that the Authority sets demanding efficiency targets that either deliver the same or higher levels of service for less money or more or better services for the same cost. Those targets are consistently exceeded, with an estimated £14.5m savings achieved over the two years up to 31 March 2010, including £8.7m in 2008/09. This is the equivalent to £33 per Band D property (national average £54).

We are now well on course to achieving our 2008/11 target of over £20m, which is in line with the same high level of savings achieved in the previous three years.

You said, we listened, we did...

The largest single concern you have raised with us over the past year has been rowdy and anti-social behaviour – it's what most calls to the police are about and one of the most common concerns brought up at public meetings and in surveys.

In response, the Authority has tasked the Constabulary to place an even greater emphasis on tackling the local concerns that affect your everyday lives, in particular, anti-social behaviour and anti-social, and often dangerous, motoring.

To deliver this, we have pledged our on-going support for more visible and accessible policing and, despite significant funding reductions, have committed substantial resources to ensure our Neighbourhood Policing Teams remain at the heart of policing in the county.

At the same time, we recognise the need to maintain our covert capability to tackle serious and organised crime. These crimes can take extensive resources and time to bring offenders to justice. You may not be aware of them at a local level but crimes such as drug trafficking can impact on burglary, theft and robbery, as criminals try to fund their illegal drug habits.

You can find details in our Policing Plan 2010/13 about all our priorities and the targets that we will use to measure success on our website, or ring our office for a copy - see back page for details.
